

LOCAL ELECTIONS

We are proud to report that 27 NBU members are standing in the coming local council elections in England. In line with our strategy they will be standing as 'Independent' candidates. These members have all been working their wards free from the baggage of belonging to any political party. If elected it will be because they deserve to be elected. 'People not politicians' in action. Their names are only known to NBU Office and will remain so to avoid attention from the usual suspects and useful idiots.

The word democracy means 'rule by the people, not rule by a simple majority.' This of course is completely ignored as our political elite clamour for war. Have they learnt nothing from Iraq, Afganistan and Lybia. Do they really think you can bomb people into democracy. The events in Sryia have nothing to do with us the people of Britain

There is a widening gap between what people expect of democracy and what it has actually turned out to be. When democracy is limited to throwing out one bunch of out of touch elites every few years only to let another bunch in, when it demands more and more regulation and scrutiny of our lives while delivering more and more inept and wasteful management, when it ignores problems that concern us all such as grooming gangs and knife crime but is so keen to rush off to war, when we are suspicious of every utterance of those who represent us, then it is falling seriously short of what is expected.

The common purpose uniting Western governments is to bring affluence and hide costs. The costs are to freedom, Knowledge, understanding, civility, education, art, nature, the simple enjoyment of living and finally to civilisation itself. Simple majority democracy has failed, the majority as individuals may deplore what is happening, yet they show neither the will nor the understanding to insist that democracy takes another path.

Government by majority degenerates into government by a minority as disillusioned voters who feel rightly that they are represented by no particular party drop out of voting altogether.

Acton put it well in 1877 when he wrote "The one pervading evil of democracy is the tyranny of the majority, or rather of that party, not always the majority, that succeeds by force or fraud in carrying elections.

Teresa May did not consult parliament so obviously never consulted the people, she seems intent on dragging Britain into a war that cannot be won, but then when the bombs fall May and her cabinet will be deep underground safe in their bunker we the people will once again have to pay the cost of the political warmonger's

Democracy is a sham, they have taken our freedoms, ignored our wishes and now from this insane act have increased the risk to our very lives. There is another way, a better way, Fascism for Britain.

The democratic creed has clearly run its course.

It is like a tree choked by ivy, only the ivy lives, the tree itself is dying, though it still flings its leafless branches to the sky.

In the spring of democracy its watchwords of liberty and equality were torches of hope to the masses who were loaded with the chains of feudalism. The fire kindled by the french revolution carried Rousseaus classic formula throughout the western world until liberalism was the accepted creed of the 19th century. Napoleon was beaten and exiled, but the tide of liberalism could not be stopped. "All men are created free and equal."

But no formula is perfect or ever lasting. No revolution can maintain its dynamic force indefinitely. as spring waxed into summer democracy became sedate and respectable, essentially bourgeois. it gathered unto itself many vested interests, political and economic. As summer turned to autumn those vested interests, at first parasitic, became dominant, choked their host, the creed which had sanctioned their growth. Now winter has come and democracy is dying. Let us be perfectly fair. There are still many honest people who genuinely believe in democracy. So steeped are they in the traditions of liberalism that they cling desperately to its original ideas, shutting their eyes to the evils it has created. They cannot see that the system which was to have liberated man has, in fact, liberated the forces which exploit man. Our quarrel is not with those who sincerely if mistakenly believe in the ideas of democracy, but with those who use these ideas as a means for their own selfish ends. The great mass of the people care little for formula or systems. Their constant struggle for survival gives them few opportunities for theorising. It is results they want, fair wages, human working conditions, housing, opportunities for recreation and advancement, above all justice, security and faith in the future.

Democracy, or rather sham democracy, is not giving them these results and they know it. How can they believe in the existence of liberty and equality while they are tied hand and foot to a remorseless machine, while profligate luxury flaunts itself before grinding poverty? How can they have faith in a democratic future when every few days some new crisis or threat of disaster is hurled at them? How can they look to the parties for salvation when every party in its turn has signally betrayed them? The liberals have betrayed them because it was liberalism which first set in motion those forces which now threaten to overwhelm them. The conservatives have betrayed them because conservatism seeks to conserve only the vested interests which liberalism created. Labour has betrayed them because it has turned back from the revolutionary task to which it was pledged in order to pluck the fruits of the corrupt system it used to denounce. Democracy as we know it today is just a facade of high-sounding sentiments and worn out formulae, behind which are entrenched an army of vested interests. we know them well, the cosmopolitan financier, the self seeking media magnate, the careerist politician, the wordy intellectual, the cultural Marxist. None of these care a jot for the principle of liberty, apart from its propaganda value. But one and all want liberty to pursue their own ends and preserve their own particular grafts. Therefore the people must defend liberty even to the death. Consider the situation as it confronts us today. Consider the economic aspect. Tax after tax, mortgage after mortgage is being loaded on to our unfortunate nation. handicapped by a corrupt and obsolescent system, productive enterprise is being bled white to meet the cost of defending that system. Consider the ideological aspect. The fate of a civilised Christian people has been placed in the hands of men who have climbed to power by utter disregard of every Christian principle. Consider the military aspect. Men who have voluntarily offered their services to defend their own country are being used for military adventures on behalf of any corrupt state which considers itself the 'victim of dictatorial aggression'. Consider the psychological aspect. Every baseless rumour, every distorted item of news, every product of minds warped with spite is eagerly used as fuel for the belching chimneys of multi-cultural propaganda. Our whole national life is being polluted and degraded by a poison-cloud of fear and hate for there has not been even a pretence of seeking a mandate from the people for the suicidal policy of mass immigration. What a mockery of principles. What a travesty of truth. What a violation of elementary justice. Only a system in its deaththroes could jettison everything for which it once stood.

Memories And MEMORABILIA: Let The Buyer Beware.

Seth Tyrssen

Those of us who have a bit of change left over after we've topped off the fuel tank in our Rolls-Royce ... that would be most of us, right? (Ouch! Who threw that?) might well be tempted to look into buying original memorabilia, from the 1930's. There's not a lot out there, where the British Union of Fascists is concerned, but even among the scant offerings, it is necessary to really know what you're getting. There is, alas, a busy market in fakes.

Top: A badge from the "Blackshirt Automobile Club." Is it real? Did such a club exist? Don't know. Below: a really bad fake Blackshirt uniform and armband. Right: a reproduction armband, top, and a probably original, below.

There are, no doubt, a number of authentic items out there. After all, at least some of it must have survived from those days; but I've seen "standard tops" that were obviously fake, and other items that were actually quite good.

For a while, a company called World Wide Relics was offering some excellent reproductions -- some were so good that they were accidentally mis-identified as original items, and sold as such. The uniform shown below is one example.

The peaked visor cap is one of the WWR modern reproductions; not only is its attention to detail really excellent, it was contracted to be made by the same company that made the originals. To the best of my knowledge, they're no longer available, unless you stumble across one on Ebay.

*Above: stick pin and badge. Original or repro?
It can often be hard to tell.*

The drums above are almost certainly original; the uniform button is not.

One often hears about secret stashes of film or memorabilia, a little of which has actually surfaced and been shared; but all the secret stuff rotting away in someone's attic or basement is absolutely useless. Rather like the people who insist on letting some classic car rot away in their field, because they refuse to let go of it, either because "it's too valuable" or it belonged to their granny, or some such rot. In the end, they have a pile of rust and nothing more. We have a bunch like that, in my part of the country.

I do know of a gent who claims to have one of the Brough-Superior motorcycles that escorted Mosley, stashed away somewhere. It was promised to me if the gent died; but I seriously doubt I'll ever see it. Not wishing him any sudden demise, of course.

As you can see, if you're going to get into "memorabilia" you'd either better really know your stuff, or know someone who does. The book "Mosley's Men In Black" can be of great help, but you can still get burned.

My best suggestion? Buy up everything the NBU currently offers, and will offer in the future. Let someone in the next generation or two argue about whether or not it's "authentic NBU stuff from the early 2000's!"

That'll learn 'em, eh?

HAVE YOUR SAY

I despair at politically correct police forces.

I am bound to ask again: Whither England? A few days ago a 78-year-old man and his disabled wife were in bed asleep when two travellers broke in and one of them, armed with a screwdriver, attacked the old man and, in the fight that followed, the burglar was killed as the old man defended his wife and his home.

Very good, your readers might think. But, oh no, the brave old Englishman was arrested by our police force and charged with murder. He was eventually freed after a public outcry. Now he dare not go back home after death threats from the dead man's family. The police appear to have done nothing.

The next step for the family of his attackers was to keep putting flowers, messages and the like across from the victim's home including messages which claimed the dead man was more-or-less a saint!

Needless to say, this outraged the local folks who ripped down the notes and moved the flowers. This had to happen a few times until the local police force became involved.

Did they tell the family to stop putting their notes and flowers there as they were annoying and upsetting people? Oh no! The brave bobbies ordered the inflamed locals to stop moving the notes and flowers or face action. Seems the right of the attacker's family to grieve must be respected. What is happening?

Our politically-correct police leaders get worse. What with the leader of our own force making Derbyshire a laughing stock in the national newspapers over the Male Voice Choir and now the disgraceful happenings over the death of a scumbag. I despair.

When will the normal folk start to do something about all this?

"I feel peace as I walk the leafy lanes, look out over those hills, boy it looks like rain..."

For many of us, Nationalism is a way of life. It stirs something deep inside, a feeling of belonging, of pride, and loyalty to one's race and nation.

We glance at the old building's, giving them 'a nod of respect' and wonder about our forefathers who gave blood, sweat & tears, toiling to build this once great land.

We educate ourselves about British/ English history to the point we can annihilate our foes with a glance.

No strange handshakes or trouser leg rolled up in our club, knowledge is power in the Patriots game. Being involved in Nationalism can also be a lonely existence, not everyone can spot 'fools gold' ...it's a gift from above. We've no time for part-time lentil munching, limpwristed, hand-wringing ditherers, it's a way of life for us!.

Being a Nationalist can be compared to spreading the teachings of God..a few jest and snigger, some get unruly, but the majority see truth and honesty.

Nationalists, akin to the English rose, love the limelight, and feel extremely proud should their letters be printed or name mentioned either inside or outside the political arena...'to be someone, must be a wonderful thing' .enough said!.

So, as I sit here thinking about the enemies I've made, the education I've gained, and the drunken stupors in The Crown we could never evade.. Was Nationalism worth it... ABSOLUTELY!.

M.S

I find myself becoming more and more fearful of the establishment parties as you are turning this country into a place that I no longer feel at home in, or feel a part of.

I watch you all in parliament, and no, not just the two leaders but every politician that I see, stand up in parliament sneering at each other and acting like children (and if you were my children I would be ashamed of you all ... what an example to set!)

Although you would like us all to believe that you are putting the needs of this country at the forefront, none of you are doing that, you seem more interested in "oneup-manship ", in scoring off each other, & denigrating each other, to the detriment of this country & its people.

It seems to be all about YOU as individuals, and not about what you can DO for this country.

It is fast becoming a place that I do not recognize as the place, I always thought, was the best place in the world to be. But no longer. You are not listening to the people of this country! I am watching the deterioration of living standards in this country, (and according to you, on a world stage we are doing better than most countries ... REALLY?)

And yet the gap is widening between the "haves" and the "have-nots".

I see our homeless on the streets, our hospitals under-funded, and understaffed, our health system is an absolute mess and a disgrace ... And yet I see multi-millions of pounds being sent offshore in aid to other countries before attending to this country's needs!

I see the "selling off" of water rights to foreign interests, WHY? Especially when you go to great lengths to tell us that water is a finite resource and, supposedly, we must ALL be careful with how we use it so that we ensure we have it for the future?

A Carbon Tax (which you KNOW is just another tax) will make NO appreciable difference, to carbon emissions, AT ALL! A tax, which in spite of all your arguments FOR it, you are doing alone, when other major countries will NOT & DO NOT embrace it, or believe in it! All that it will do for this country is put working families and small businesses behind the eight ball, what planet are you on?

If you think that the tax we must pay will make even a scrap of difference, to the effect of the carbon tax on people? Anyone can see the holes in that argument! Do you really think we are that dumb?

Let's talk about Multiculturalism. People have come here from other countries, for a better life, for decades. Post war immigrants came for a better life, and settled in, and became wonderful contributors to this country, ... all have contributed to the rich diversity of this country, and some descendants have even fought FOR this country, and they have become U.K. citizens and were glad to be, and they had NO handouts from our Government either, they worked hard for everything!	Please tell me why we have some RADICAL clerics demanding Sharia Law in this country when, if we were in THEIR country, this would NEVER be allowed?	And no, I am NOT racist! If I did not like Catholics or Protestants would I be considered racist? Of course not!

I have never before had a problem with all, or any, race of immigrants coming here. However, I DO NOW!	Please tell me why our laws need to be changed so as not to OFFEND someone?	Why is it that if we object to what is happening in our country we are immediately labelled RACIST in an attempt to shut us up?
Please tell me why we have areas in towns and on large estates all over the country, where police do NOT, & will NOT go, for fear of their life?	Please tell me why we are fast becoming a MINORITY voice in our own country because of POLITICAL CORRECTNESS?	We are fighting Radical Muslims in Afghanistan & Iraq, are we not? I hear you say "yes but the Muslims we have here are Not like That". Well how would we know?
Please tell me why we can no longer have religion in schools, for fear of "OFFENDING" someone? (The latest little gem is that they are not having, or being funded, for chaplains any more, but Counsellors!)	Please tell me WHY Britons cannot legally wear a bike helmet covering their head in a bank, and yet it is ok to wear a Burqa which covers the whole of the face? And please tell me WHY, when those people who want asylum here can wreck our detention centres and STILL be accepted here?	Do we hear ANY of them coming out & speaking AGAINST radicals? I haven't, have you? Islam is not compatible with ANY of the values that we hold here in Britain!
Please tell me why religious Christmas observances are no longer allowed in some schools, for fear of OFFENDING someone?	What does that say about just who and what are this government's priorities?	Are not the experiences of France and the Netherlands examples of that?
Please tell me HOW Christmas decorations in some stores might OFFEND someone?	The British people that I speak to have genuine concerns about becoming a second-class minority in our own country, and the reasons for it are some of the above. Are you so blind that you cannot see this?	Why do you think it would be any different here?
Please tell me why we have to have segregated days in some swimming centres, for fear of "OFFENDING" someone?		We even have a British born "radical " whose message is that Britain WILL become a Muslim country under Sharia Law, and that we had "better get used to it ".
		Will any of you grow some "balls", and start sticking up for this country and its people? We are the people who put you where you are and PAY you to look after OUR interests!

And you are NOT doing that by any stretch of the imagination!

In case it has escaped you I would like to remind you that, in the U.K., Government is FOR THE PEOPLE ... OF THE PEOPLE ... & BY THE PEOPLE.

And under NBU it will be again!

Hello readers and comrades,

Some people occasionally doubt the potential of the youth to assist in the process of gaining the fascist state. This assumption is very commonplace among many people, in the sense that the youth can not be "tamed" or organised effectively.

This assumption is very wrong and based (mainly) on only one argument.

The youth is actually the strongest force within our movement as their minds are still developing and thus they are more able to "deposit" information; thus, the youth has the full potential and capability of learning to love and respect our great civilization and to care and continue it for a very long time.

A fully developed man learns his values from a young age and this has been proven many times.

make our youth submissive, we should start to believe that it is our duty to protect the youth from further harm- actually it IS our DUTY to do that!

So the youth is the precious future of the country and it should not be let to be lost.

Vasileios (Bill) K. Spiliopoulos
NBU Youth Officer

I had the great pleasure of meeting the Leader for the first time recently. I found him to be very approachable a down to earth type who certainly draws attention when walking into a room. Like many of you I had heard all sorts of nonsense about Gary but after a while of talking with him any concerns I had were put to rest. Why not organise a meeting in your area and invite the Leader and find out for yourselves.

MARK MITCHELL

Another reason why the youth is very strong and vital is that the youth is stronger and has a much greater potential of being active within our movement. In this way, we can accomplish our targets easier and we can ensure that they will remain on for many generations to pass on.

For one thing we can hope: that our youth will not be influenced anymore by the corrupt mentality of this world. If we think and see for a while what has happened the past few years and how many attempts have been made to weaken and

The SALUTE

In an interview given with the mocking, leftist TV host David Frost, Sir Oswald was criticized for using the “Nazi salute.” Sir Oswald replied, “That salute was around for 2000 years before Hitler was even born. It is a European salute, and I am proud of it!”

It is often referred to as the “Roman salute,” as it was known to be used in the time of the Roman Empire; Benito Mussolini borrowed it from that source, and the German NSDAP borrowed it from him. But its use was not limited to Fascists and National Socialists.

At left, just under Sir Oswald, we see a group of youngsters in the Brazilian Integralist movement; and below them, the modern Hezbollah in Iran. (Though fanatic Muslims, “Iran” is derived from “Aryan,” which they originally were.)

And below them, we have a group of school children in America, giving what is called the “Bellamy salute,” named for the guy who wrote the Pledge of Allegiance. Below right, its use in modern Singapore. Having withstood the test of time, we modern Fascists, like Sir Oswald, remain proud of it.

FASCISM IS NOT ANTI-SEMITIC-by Sir Oswald Mosley

The British Union of Fascists is not anti-Semitic. Attacks on Jews in any shape or form were strictly forbidden with in a month after the movement was launched. This order has been loyally obeyed by all the members.

The few who did not agree to do so were excluded from the movement.

Fascism stands for religious and racial tolerance. If a Jew is associated with Communism or the financial policy which we are against, we shall fight him not as a Jew but as an opponent.

We have no quarrel with Jews as Jews, just as we have no quarrel with Catholics as Catholics. Fascism is in no sense anti-Semitic, and bias for or against the Jews is completely irrelevant to the issues involved in our political creed.

Anti-Semitism was never known in Fascist Italy, and Mussolini has often expressed himself in this sense.

The attacks on Jews in Germany do not rest on any Fascist principle but are the manifestation of an inherent quality in the German character.

This issue has always arisen in Germany in one form or another in times of crisis.

It is foolish to blame Fascism for something that has its source in the mentality of a particular nation, or at least of a considerable section of that nation.

Here in Great Britain Fascism is British through and through. It is backed by the national character, which has never countenanced and always opposed religious and racial persecution.

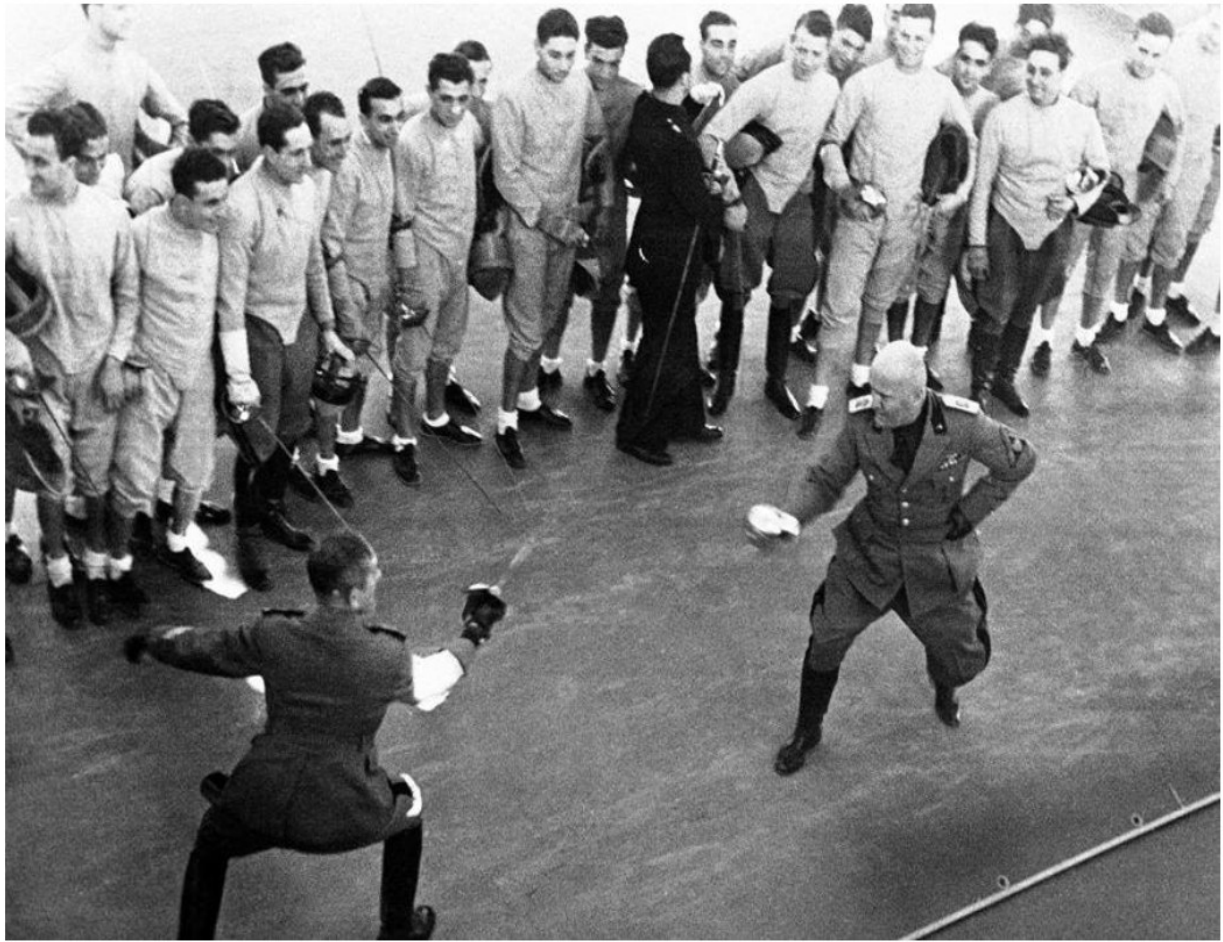

For many centuries religious and racial tolerance has been part of the British character, and I give my assurance that under Fascism that great tradition will be preserved.

Oswald Mosley August 4 1933

Fun Fascist Facts

It is well known that Fascism promotes a healthy society, and healthy individuals. We've seen pictures of Mussolini swimming, or riding his motorcycle. Like Sir Oswald Mosley, he was also pretty good with a sword. (Sir Oswald was an Olympic-class fencer, in case you didn't know.)

Unlike most sporting fencers, however, Il Duce also took it seriously. Although dueling was illegal in Italy by this time, he is known to have fought five duels, the most well-known being a bout with anti-Fascist newspaper editor Francisco Ciccotti, in 1921. Apparently he injured Ciccotti badly enough so that he was declared the winner of that duel. Ciccotti fled Italy after the March on Rome.

As greedy, treacherous “leaders” seem to be pushing us ever closer to World War 3, we would do well to remember these words from the past ...

A nation lives forever through its concepts, honour, and culture. It is for these reasons that the rulers of nations must judge and basis of the nation's historical honour, of the
